Description:
Containing records for approximately 123 million Americans, the 1930 United States Federal Census is the largest census released to date and is the most recent census available for public access. The census gives us a glimpse into the lives of Americans in 1930, and contains information about a household's family members and occupants including: birthplaces, occupations, immigration, citizenship, and military service. The names of those listed in the census are linked to actual images of the 1930 Census. Learn more...

John Ross (Cherokee chief)

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

John Ross (October 3, 1790 – August 1, 1866), also known as Koo-wi-s-gu-wi (meaning in Cherokee: "Mysterious Little White Bird"), was the Principal Chief of the Cherokee Nation from 1828–1866, serving longer in this position than any other person. Described as the Moses of his people,[1] Ross influenced the Indian nation through such tumultuous events as the relocation to Indian Territory and the American Civil War.

Died	August 1, 1866 (aged 75) Washington, D.C.
Resting place	Ross Cemetery, Cherokee County, Oklahoma
Spouse(s)	Quatie Brown Henley (born c. 1790–1839) Mary Brian Stapler (1826–1865)

Known for	opposition to Treaty of New Echota; Trail of Tears; Union supporter during American Civil War

John Ross was the son of a Cherokee mother and a Scottish father. His mother and maternal grandmother were of mixed Scots-Cherokee ancestry, since his maternal grandfather was another Scottish immigrant. As a result, young John (one-eighth Cherokee by blood quantum) grew up bilingual and bicultural, an experience that served him well when his parents decided to send him to schools that served other mixed race Cherokee. After graduation, he was appointed an Indian agent in 1811. During the War of 1812, he served as adjutant of a Cherokee regiment under the command of Andrew Jackson. After the Red Stick War ended, Ross demonstrated his business acumen by starting a tobacco farm in Tennessee. In 1816, he built a warehouse and trading post on the Tennessee River north of the mouth of Chattanooga Creek, and started a ferry service that carried passengers from the south side of the river (Cherokee Nation) to the north side (USA). His businesses served as the start of a community known as Ross's Landing on the Tennessee River (now modern-day Chattanooga, Tennessee). Concurrently, John Ross developed a keen interest in Cherokee politics, attracting the attention of the Cherokee elders, especially Principal Chiefs Pathkiller and Charles R. Hicks, who, along with Major Ridge, became his political mentors.

Ross first went to Washington, D.C. in 1816 as part of a Cherokee delegation to negotiate issues of national boundaries, land ownership and white encroachment. As the only delegate fluent in English, Ross became the principal negotiator, despite his relative youth. When he returned to the Cherokee Nation in 1817, he was elected to the National Council. He became council president in the following year. The majority of the council were men like Ross, who were wealthy, educated, English-speaking and of mixed blood. Even the traditionalist full-blood Cherokee perceived that he had the skills necessary to contest the whites' demands that the Cherokee cede their land and move beyond the Mississippi River. In this position, Ross's first action was to reject an offer of $200,000 from the US Indian agent made for the Cherokee to voluntarily relocate. Thereafter Ross made more trips to Washington, even as white demands intensified. In 1824, Ross boldly petitioned Congress for redress of Cherokee grievances, the first time a tribe had ever shown the audacity to do such a thing. Along the way, Ross built political support in the capital for the Cherokee cause.

Both Pathkiller and Charles R. Hicks died in January 1827. Hicks's brother, William, was appointed interim chief. Ross and Major Ridge shared responsibilities for the affairs of the tribe. William Hicks did not impress the Cherokee as a leader. They elected Ross as permanent principal chief in October 1828. He remained so until he died.

The issue of removal split the Cherokee Nation politically. Ross, backed by the majority, tried repeatedly to stop white political powers from forcing the tribe to move. They became known as the National Party. Others, who came to believe that further resistance would be futile, wanted to seek the best settlement they could get. They formed the "Treaty Party" or "Ridge Party," led by Major Ridge. The Treaty Party was convinced to sign the Treaty of New Echota on December 29, 1835, requiring the Cherokee to leave by 1838. Neither Ross nor the council approved it, but the Federal government regarded the treaty as valid. It would send the Army to move those who did not depart by 1838 in an action known ever after as the "Trail of Tears." About one-fourth of the Cherokee forced to move died along the trail. The dead included Ross's wife, Quatie.

Ross tried unsuccessfully to restore political unity after the arrival in Indian Territory. Unknown people assassinated the leaders of the Treaty Party, except for Stand Watie, who escaped and became Ross's most implacable foe. Soon, the issue of slavery refueled the old division. The Treaty Party morphed into the "Southern Party," while the National Party largely became the "Union Party." Ross initially counseled neutrality, believing that joining in the "white man's war" would be disastrous for the tribe. After Union Forces abandoned their forts in Indian Territory, Ross reversed himself and signed a treaty with the Confederacy. He later fled to Union-held Kansas and Stand Watie became the de facto chief. The Confederates lost the war, Watie became the last Confederate general to surrender, and Ross returned to his post as principal chief. Confronted with negotiating the Reconstruction Treaty with the United States, he made yet another trip to Washington, where he died on August 1, 1866.

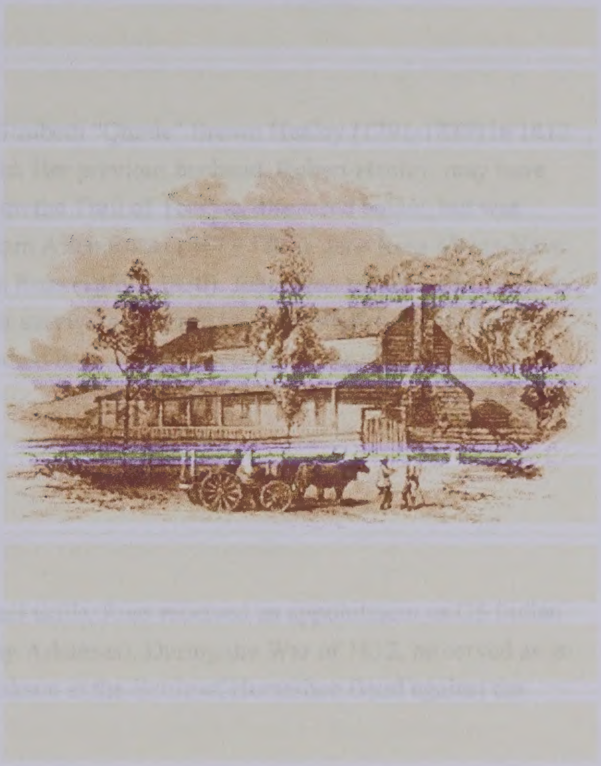
Early life and education

Ross (also known by his Cherokee name, Guwisguwi)[2] was born in Turkeytown (in modern day Alabama), near the head of the Coosa River, to Mollie (née McDonald) and her husband Daniel Ross, an immigrant Scots trader.[3][4] His siblings who survied to adulthood included Jane Ross Coodey (1787 - 1844), Elizabeth Grace Ross Ross (1789 - 1876), Lewis Ross (1796 - 1870), Andrew Tlo-s-ta-ma Ross (1798 - 1840), Margaret Ross Hicks (1803 - 1862) and Maria Ross Mulkey (1806 - 1838)*

Genealogy

Because his mother and grandmother were mixed-race Cherokee, under the matrilineal tradition, Ross belonged to her Bird Clan.[3][4] His great-grandmother Ghigooie, a full-blood Cherokee, had married William Shorey, a Scottish interpreter. Their daughter, Anna, married John McDonald, a Scots trader.[5] In 1786 Anna and John's daughter, Mollie McDonald, married Daniel Ross, a Scots trader who had begun to live among the Cherokee during the American Revolution.[6] Thus, Ross was one-eighth Cherokee and seven-eighths Scots



House built in early 19th century by John McDonald, maternal grandfather of John Ross. Now called the "John Ross House," it was occupied by Ross' daughter and her husband, Nicholas Scales. It is located in Rossville, Georgia.

Childhood and education

Ross spent his childhood with his parents in near Lookout Mountain. Educated in English by white men in a frontier American environment, Ross spoke the Cherokee language poorly, but his bi-cultural background later allowed him to represent the Cherokee to the United States government. Many full-blood Cherokee frequented his father's trading company, so he encountered tribal members on many levels. As a child, Ross participated in tribal events, such as the Green Corn Festival.

John Ross Home, Rossville, Georgia. The House was built in 1797 by John McDonald, grandfather of John Ross, and was Ross' home until he left on the "Trail of Tears".

The elder Ross insisted that John also receive a rigorous classical education. After being educated at home, Ross pursued higher studies with the Reverend Gideon Blackburn, who established two schools in southeast Tennessee for Cherokee children. Classes were in English and students were mostly of mixed race, like Ross. The young Ross finished his education at an academy in South West Point, near Kingston, Tennessee.[7]

Anglo Metis background of the Cherokee Moses

Ross's life resembled prominent Anglo-Métis in the northern United States and Canada. Scots and English fur traders in North America were typically men of social status and financial standing who married high-ranking Native

American women. Both sides believed these were strategic alliances, helping the Native Americans and the traders. They educated their children in bi-cultural and multilingual environments. The mixed-race children often married and rose to positions of stature in society, both in political and economic terms.[8]

Family life

John Ross survived two wives and had several children. He married Elizabeth "Quatie" Brown Henley (1791-1839) in 1812 or 1813. She was a Cherokee, born in 1791 and a widow with one child. Her previous husband, Robert Henley, may have died during the War of 1812.[9] Quatie Ross died in 1839 in Arkansas on the Trail of Tears as discussed below, but was survived by their children James McDonald Ross (1814 - 1864), William Allen Ross (1817 - 1891), Jane Ross Meigs-Nave (1821 - 1894), Silas Dean Ross (1829 - 1872) and George Washington Ross (1830 - 1870). John Ross remarried in 1844, to Mary Stapler (1826-1865) whom he survived by less than a year. Their surviving children were Annie Brian Ross Dobson (1845 - 1876) and John Ross (1847 - 1905), although John Ross Sr. would be succeeded as chief by his nephew John P. Ross.[10]

Careers

Indian agent

At the age of twenty, having completed his education and with bilingual skills, Ross received an appointment as US Indian agent to the western Cherokee and sent to their territory (in present-day Arkansas). During the War of 1812, he served as an adjutant in a Cherokee regiment. He fought under General Andrew Jackson at the Battle of Horseshoe Bend against the British-allied Upper Creek warriors, known as the Red Sticks.

Businessman and founder of Chattanooga

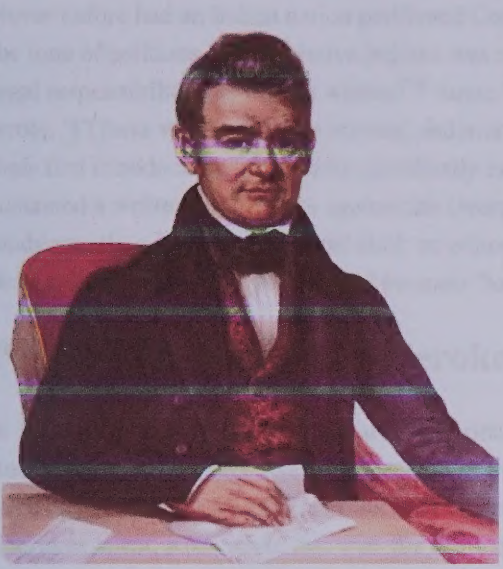
Ross began a series of business ventures which made him among the wealthiest of all Cherokee. He derived the majority of his wealth from cultivating 170 acres (0.69 km^2) tobacco in Tennessee worked by twenty slaves.[11][12]

In 1816 he founded Ross's Landing, served by a ferry crossing. After the Cherokee were removed to Oklahoma in the 1830s, American settlers changed the name of Ross's Landing to Chattanooga. In addition, Ross established a trading firm and warehouse. In total, he earned upwards of $1,000 a year ($14.1 thousand in today's terms). In 1827 Ross moved to Rome, Georgia, to be closer to New Echota, the Cherokee capital. In Rome, Ross established a ferry along the headwaters of the Coosa River close to the home of Major Ridge, an older wealthy and influential Cherokee leader. By December 1836, Ross's properties were appraised at $23,665 ($516112 today). He was then one of the five wealthiest men in the Cherokee Nation.[13]

Political apprenticeship

Between 1811 to 1827 Ross learned how to conduct negotiations with the United States and the skills required to run a national government. After 1814, Ross's political career as a Cherokee legislator and diplomat progressed with the support of individuals such as the Principal Chief Pathkiller,[14] Assistant Principal Chief Charles R. Hicks, and Casey Holmes, an elder statesman of the Cherokee Nation, as well as the women elders of his clan.

By 1813, as relations with the United States became more complex, older, uneducated chiefs such as Pathkiller could not effectively defend Cherokee interests. Ross's ascent showed Cherokee leaders recognized the importance of educated, English-speaking leaders. Both Pathkiller and Hicks trained Ross, who served as their clerk and worked on all financial and political matters of the nation.[15] They also steeped him in Cherokee tradition. In a series of letters to Ross, Hicks outlined known Cherokee traditions.[16]



A young John Ross

In 1816, the chief's council named Ross to his first delegation to American leaders in Washington D.C. The delegation of 1816 was directed to resolve sensitive issues, including national boundaries, land ownership, and white encroachment on Cherokee land. Only Ross was fluent in English, making him a central figure, although Cherokee society traditionally favored older leaders.[17]

In November 1817, the Cherokee formed the National Council. Ross was elected to the thirteen-member body, where each man served two-year terms. The National Council was created to consolidate Cherokee political authority after General then President Andrew Jackson made two treaties with small cliques of Cherokee representing minority factions. Membership in the National Council placed Ross among the Cherokee ruling elite. The majority of the men were wealthy, mixed-race and English-speaking, although most Cheroke still spoke only Cherokee.

President of the National Committee

In November 1818, just before the General Council meeting with the U.S. Indian agent Joseph McMinn assigned to deal with the Cherokee, Ross became president of the National Committee, a position he would hold through 1827. The Council selected Ross for that leadership position because they believed he had the diplomatic skills necessary to rebuff American requests to cede Cherokee lands. He soon refused McMinn's offer of $200,000 US, conditioned upon the Cherokee voluntarily removing themselves beyond the Mississippi.[18]

In 1819, the Council sent Ross to Washington, D.C.. He assumed a larger leadership role. The delegation proposed to clarify the provisions of the Treaty of 1817--both to limit the ceded lands and clarify Cherokee right to the remaining lands. Secretary of War John C. Calhoun pressed Ross to cede large tracts of land in Tennessee and Georgia. Although he refused, the US government pressure continued and intensified. In October 1822, Calhoun requested that the Cherokee relinquish their land claimed by Georgia, in fulfillment of the United States' obligation under the Compact of 1802. Before responding to Calhoun's proposition, Ross first ascertained the sentiment of the Cherokee people. They were unanimously opposed to further cession of land.

In January 1824, Ross traveled to Washington to defend the Cherokee possession of their land. Calhoun offered two solutions to the Cherokee delegation: either relinquish title to their lands and remove west, or accept denationalization and become citizens of the United States. Rather than accept Calhoun's ultimatum, Ross directly petitioned Congress for the Cherokee cause on April 15, 1824. This fundamentally altered the traditional relationship between an Indian nation and the US government.

Never before had an Indian nation petitioned Congress with grievances. In Ross' correspondence, what had previously been the tone of petitions by submissive Indians was replaced by assertive defenders. Ross was able to argue subtle points about legal responsibilities as well as whites.[19] Some in Washington recognized the change. Future president John Quincy Adams wrote, "[T]here was less Indian oratory, and more of the common style of white discourse, than in the same chief's speech on their first introduction."[20] Adams specifically noted Ross as "the writer of the delegation" and remarked that "they [had] sustained a written controversy against the Georgia delegation with greate[sic] advantage."[20] Georgia's delegation inadvertently acknowledged Ross' skill: an editorial published in The Georgia Journal charged that "the Cherokee delegation's letters were fraudulent" because "too refined to have been written or dictated by an Indian".[21]

Principal Chief of the Cherokee Nation

In January 1827, Pathkiller, the Cherokee's principal chief and last hereditary chief, and, two weeks later, Charles R. Hicks, Ross's mentor, both died. Ross, as president of the National Committee and Major Ridge, as speaker of the National Council, were responsible for the affairs of the tribe.[22] In a letter dated February 23, 1827, to Colonel Hugh Montgomery, the Cherokee agent, Ross wrote that with the death of Hicks, he had assumed responsibility for all public business of The Nation. Charles Hicks' brother William served briefly as interim chief until a permanent chief could be elected. Although he believed he was the natural heir to his brother's position, William Hicks had not impressed the tribe with his abilities. A majority of the people knew that during the year Ross, not Hicks, had taken care of all of the mundane business of the tribe. On October 17, 1828 the Cherokee elected John Ross as principal chief.[23]

The Cherokee Council passed a series of laws creating a bicameral national government. In 1822 they created the Cherokee Supreme Court, capping the creation of a three-branch government. In May 1827, Ross was elected to the twenty-four member constitutional committee. It drafted a constitution calling for a principal chief, a council of the principal chiefs, and a National Committee, which together would form the General Council of the Cherokee Nation, a constitutional republic. Although the constitution was ratified in October 1827, it did not take effect until October 1828, at which point Ross was elected principal chief. He was repeatedly reelected and held this position until his death in 1866. He was very popular, among both full-bloods, who comprised three-fourths of the population, and mixed-bloods.[14]

The Cherokee had created a constitutional republic with delegated authority capable of formulating a clear, long-range policy to protect national rights.

Supreme Court litigation

Ross found support in Congress from individuals in the National Republican Party, such as senators Henry Clay, Theodore Frelinghuysen, and Daniel Webster and representatives Ambrose Spencer and David (Davy) Crockett. Despite this support, in April 1829, John H. Eaton, Secretary of War (1829–1831), informed Ross that President Jackson would support the right of Georgia to extend her laws over the Cherokee people.

On December 8, 1829, President Andrew Jackson made a speech announcing his intention to pass a bill through Congress by the following spring requiring Indian tribes living in the Southeastern states to move west of the Mississippi.[24]

On December 19, 1829, the Georgia legislature, enacted a series of laws which confiscated a large section of Cherokee land, nullified Cherokee law within the confiscated area, banned further meetings of the Cherokee government in Georgia, declared contracts between Indians and whites null and void unless witnessed by two whites, disallowed Indians from testifying against a white person in court and forbade Cherokee to dig for gold on their own lands. The laws were made effective June 1, 1830.[25] These were calculated to force the Cherokee to move.

John Ross in suit with top hat.

In May 1830, Congress endorsed Jackson's policy of removal by passing the Indian Removal Act. Jackson signed the Act on May 23. It authorized the president to set aside lands west of the Mississippi to exchange for the lands of the Indian nations in the Southeast. In the summer of 1830, Jackson urged the Cherokee, Chickasaw, Choctaw and Creek to sign individual treaties accepting removal from their homelands. The Cherokee refused to attend a meeting in Nashville that Jackson proposed. The other tribes signed off on Jackson's terms.[26]

When Ross and the Cherokee delegation failed in their efforts to protect Cherokee lands through dealings with the executive branch and Congress, Ross took the radical step of defending Cherokee rights through the U.S. courts. In June 1830, at the urging of Senator Webster and Senator Frelinghuysen, the Cherokee delegation selected William Wirt, US Attorney General in the Monroe and Adams administrations, to defend Cherokee rights before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Wirt argued two cases on behalf of the Cherokee: Cherokee Nation v. Georgia and Worcester v. Georgia. In Cherokee Nation v. Georgia,' Chief Justice John Marshall acknowledged that the Cherokee were a sovereign nation, stating, "[T]he Cherokees as a state, as a distinct political society, separated from others, capable of managing its own affairs and governing itself, has, in the opinion of a majority of the judges, been completely successful." But he did not compel President Jackson to take action that would defend the Cherokee from Georgia's laws, because he did not find that the U.S. Supreme Court had original jurisdiction over a case in which a tribe was a party.

In 1832, the Supreme Court further defined the relation of the federal government and the Cherokee Nation. In Worcester v. Georgia, the Court found that Georgia could not extend its laws to the Cherokee Nation because that was a power of the federal government. Marshall stated that "the acts of Georgia are repugnant to the Constitution, laws and treaties of the United States. They interfere forcibly with the relations established between the United States and the Cherokee nation, the regulation of which, according to the settled principles of our Constitution, are committed exclusively to the government of the Union." The Cherokee were considered sovereign enough to legally resist the government of Georgia, and they were encouraged to do so.

The court maintained that the Cherokee Nation was dependent on the federal government, much like a protectorate state, but still a sovereign entity. But the dispute was made moot when federal legislation in the form of the Indian Removal Act exercised the federal government's legal power to handle the whole affair. The series of decisions embarrassed Jackson politically, as Whigs attempted to use the issue in the 1832 election. They largely supported his earlier opinion that the "Indian Question" was one that was best handled by the federal government, and not local authorities.

Meanwhile, the Cherokee Nation had encountered financial hard times. The U. S. government had stopped paying the agreed-upon $6,000 annuity for previous land cessions, Georgia had effectively cut off any income from the gold fields in Cherokee lands, and the Cherokee Nation's application for a federal government loan was rejected in February, 1831. With great difficulty (and private donations) Ross was able to pay the Cherokee Nation's legal bills.[27]

Ridge Party opposition

In a meeting in May 1832, Supreme Court Justice John McLean spoke with the Cherokee delegation to offer his views on their situation. McLean's advice was to "remove and become a Territory with a patent in fee simple to the nation for all its lands and a delegate in Congress, but reserving to itself the entire right of legislation and selection of all officers." He agreed to send Ross a letter explaining his views. Ross was furious, believing that this was a form of treachery.[28]

McLean's advice precipitated a split within the Cherokee leadership as John Ridge and Elias Boudinot began to doubt Ross's leadership. John Ridge introduced a resolution at the national council meeting in October, 1832 to send a delegation to Washington to discuss a removal treaty with President Jackson. The council rejected Ridge's proposal and instead selected Joseph Vann, John Baldridge, Richard Taylor and John Ross to represent the Cherokee.[29] In February 1833, Ridge wrote Ross advocating that the delegation dispatched to Washington that month should begin removal negotiations with Jackson. Ridge and Ross did not have irreconcilable worldviews; neither believed that the Cherokee could fend off Georgian usurpation of Cherokee land. However, Ridge was furious that Ross had refused to consider Jackson's offer to pay the Cherokee $3,000,000 for all their lands in Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee.[30]

In this environment, Ross led a delegation to Washington in March 1834 to try to negotiate alternatives to removal. Ross made several proposals; however, the Cherokee Nation may not have approved any of Ross's plans, nor was there reasonable expectation that Jackson would settle for any agreement short of removal. These offers, coupled with the lengthy cross-continental trip, indicated that Ross's strategy was to prolong negotiations on removal indefinitely. There was the possibility that the next President might be more favorably inclined.

Ross's strategy was flawed because it was susceptible to the United States' making a treaty with a minority faction. On May 29, 1834, Ross received word from John H. Eaton, that a new delegation, including Major Ridge, John Ridge, Elias Boudinot, and Ross' younger brother Andrew, collectively called the "Ridge Party" or "Treaty Party", had arrived in Washington with the goal of signing a treaty of removal. The two sides attempted reconciliation, but by October 1834 still had not come to an agreement. In January 1835 the factions were again in Washington. Pressured by the presence of the Ridge Party, Ross agreed on February 25, 1835, to exchange all Cherokee lands east of the Mississippi for land west of the Mississippi and 20 million dollars. He made it contingent on the General Council's accepting the terms.

Treaty of New Echota and Trail of Tears

Secretary of War Lewis Cass believed this was yet another ploy to delay action on removal for an additional year, and threatened to sign the treaty with John Ridge. On December 29, 1835, the Treaty Party signed the Treaty of New Echota with the U.S. Most Cherokee thought the signatories unauthorized. However, Ross could not stop its enforcement.

Returning to his home at Head of Coosa late at night, Ross saw a man he did not recognize at his house. He told the man to feed his horse and put him away for the night. Instead, the stranger followed him to the door, identified himself as Stephen Carter and told Ross that he now owned the property and had papers to prove it. Ross then learned agents of Georgia had given Carter possession of the house earlier in the week, after evicting his family. Dispossessed by Georgia (and Carter), Ross was now homeless. The next day, Ross found that family members had given his wife Quatie refuge.[31]

General Winfield Scott forced removal of Cherokee who did not emigrate to the Indian Territory by 1838. This forced removal came to be known as the Trail of Tears. Accepting defeat, Ross convinced General Scott to allow him to supervise much of the removal process. Quatie was among the many Cherokee who died en route. According to one of the soldiers escorting the group, she had given her coat to a child that was crying because of the cold. A few days later, she died of pneumonia near Little Rock on the Arkansas River.[32] [a]

Because selling common lands was a capital crime under Cherokee law, treaty opponents assassinate Boudinot, Major Ridge and John Ridge after the migration to Indian Territory.<Moulton, John Ross: Cherokee Chief, 114> Stand Watie, Boudinot's brother, was also attacked but he survived. The assassins were never publicly identified nor tried in court. General Matthew Arbuckle, commander of Fort Gibson, claimed he knew their identities but never tried to arrest them. Some Cherokee, particularly those tied to the pro-treaty party, claimed that Chief John Ross knew about the assassinations beforehand. Many years later, Chief Ross's son Allen, wrote that this was not so. Allen's letter, is said to be in the possession of the Oklahoma State Historical Society.[33] Afterward, there were years of violence between the two factions.

Given the controversy over the struggle over territory and Ross's personal wealth, a vocal minority of Cherokee and a generation of political leaders in Washington considered Ross to be dictatorial, greedy, and an "aristocratic leader [who] sought to defraud" the Cherokee Nation.[34] Ross also had influential supporters in Washington, including Thomas L. McKenney, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs (1824–1830). He described Ross as the father of the Cherokee Nation, a Moses who "led...his people in their exodus from the land of their nativity to a new country, and from the savage state to that of civilization."[35]

Remarriage

John Ross was introduced to the Stapler family of Brandywine Springs, Delaware by Thomas McKenney in 1841. Ross had many common interests with John Stapler, a merchant and widower. His eldest daughter, Sarah, cared for her younger siblings and befriended Ross. However, her younger sister, Mary Brian Stapler, developed a real love for Ross and initiated a romantic attachment in May 1844. As the time came for Ross to return to the Indian Territory, their mutual love ripened. They married in Philadelphia on September 2, 1844.[36]

American Civil War

The Civil War divided the Cherokee people. At first the majority supported the Confederacy, which protected their slaveholdings. Fearing that joining the Confederacy would void the earlier Cherokee treaties with the United States, Ross tried to persuade his people to remain neutral in the conflict, but eventually most chose sides. Full-bloods tended to favor maintaining relations with the United States. This group included over two thousand members of a traditionalist and abolitionist society, the Keetoowah Society.[37] Members of this group were called "Pins" by non-members because they wore an emblem of crossed pins on their shirts.[38] Ross advocated that the Cherokee Nation remain neutral. It was a losing argument. At a general assembly on August 21, 1861, Ross ended his speech by announcing that in the interests of tribal and inter-Indian unity it was time to agree on an alliance with the Confederate States of America.[39] Many of the well-armed mixed bloods, especially the wealthy led by Stand Watie, supported the Confederacy. Traditionalists and Cherokee who opposed the institution of slavery remained loyal to the Union. However, the majority of Cherokee may not have understood the nature of the new treaty (Warde, When the Wolf Came: The Civil War in Indian Territory, 59).

After Ross departed to meet with President Lincoln in Washington, traditionalist Cherokee helped maneuver the selection of Ross supporter Thomas Pegg as Acting Principal Chief. Three or four of Ross's own sons fought for the Union. However, Ross's nephew by marriage, John Drew, had organized and served as Colonel of the 1st Cherokee Mounted Rifles in the Confederate Army. Most of Drew's regiment would later twice desert rather than follow Confederate orders to kill other Indians. [40][41] Many leaders of the northern faction, still led by Ross, went to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas for the duration of the war.[42]

By 1863, the flight of many Cherokee voters to refuge in Kansas and Texas provided the pro-Confederate Treaty Party an opportunity to elect Stand Watie as principal chief without them.[43] Pro-Union National Council members declared the election invalid. Watie that fall raided Ross's home, Rose Cottage. The home was looted and burned. Ross lost all his belongings. Ross's daughter Jane and her husband, Andrew Nave, were living at Rose Cottage at the time. Nave was shot and killed.[44] Only the prior intervention of Watie's wife seems to have prevented the killing of additional Ross relatives (Warde, When the Wolfe Came: The Civil War and the Indian Territory, 191). Ross's oldest son, James, who had gone to Park Hill searching for supplies, was captured and sent to prison in the Confederacy, where he died.[44] Ross remained in exile. However, within a week of the burning, the National Council convened and restored Ross as principal chief.[45]

Ross took his wife Mary and the children to Philadelphia so she could see her family. Ross returned to Washington, where he had an inconclusive meeting with President Lincoln and other supporters.[44] When he returned for Mary in 1865, he found her gravely ill with what was diagnosed as "lung congestion" (likely tuberculosis). She could not travel, so he remained with her for more than a month. Mary died of her illness on July 20, 1865. She was buried in her native Delaware. Ross returned to Indian Territory after her funeral.[46]

After the war, the two factions of the Cherokee tried to negotiate separately with the US government Southern Treaty Commission. The commissioner of Indian Affairs, Dennis N. Cooley, was persuaded to believe allegations by Stand Watie and Elias Cornelius Boudinot that Ross was a dictator who did not truly represent the Cherokee people. Even though his health was worsening, Ross left Park Hill, where he was staying with his niece, on November 9, 1865, to meet with President Andrew Johnson. Johnson instructed Cooley to reopen negotiations with the Cherokee and to meet only with the pro-Union faction, headed by John Ross. Ross died on August 1, 1866 in Washington, D.C. while still negotiating a final treaty with the federal government. However, Ross had by then persuaded Johnson to reject a particularly harsh treaty version favored by Cooley.[47]

Death and legacy

Initially, Ross was buried beside his second wife Mary in Wilmington, Delaware. A few months later, the Cherokee Nation returned his remains to the Ross Cemetery at Park Hill, Indian Territory (now Cherokee County, Oklahoma) for interment.[48][49]

Namesake and monuments

The City of Chattanooga named the Market Street Bridge in Ross's honor, and a bust of Ross stands on the north side of the Hamilton County Courthouse lawn.

The city of Rossville, Georgia, located just south of the Tennessee state line, is named for Ross.[50] It contains his former home, the John Ross House, where he lived from 1830–1838 until the state seized his lands near the Coosa River. One of the oldest surviving homes in the Chattanooga area, it has been designated as a National Historic Landmark.[51]

National Public Radio correspondent Steve Inskeep suggested that the US $20 bill be modified to carry images of both John Ross and Andrew Jackson, "illustrating our democratic experience." [52]

Media representation

- John Ross was portrayed by Johnny Cash in an episode of NET Playhouse titled "Trail of Tears" in 1971.
- John Ross's life and the Trail of Tears are dramatized in Episode 3 of the Ric Burns "American Experience" documentary, We Shall Remain (2009), shown and available online on PBS.

John Ross

John Ross' Cherokee name was Koo-wi-s-gu-wi, the name of a mythological, or rare migratory bird, and the name of one of the current districts of the Cherokee Nation.

Although only 1/8 Cherokee, he was raised traditionally and had a preference for native clothing and mode of dressing as a boy and young man. He was educated in mission schools and at private boarding schools. His first wife's name was Elizabeth Brown Henley (her Cherokee name was Que-ti) and they were married in the summer of 1813. They raised 5 children together, although she gave birth to 6, who was stillborn.

After completing his schooling, he was hired as assistant to Federal Agent Return Meigs. In this capacity, he served as an emissary to the Cherokee lands in the west. He was elected to the National Committee of theCherokee National Council after the Creek War in 1814. His first duty was negotiating treaty agreements establishing permanent boundaries for the Cherokee with the U.S. In 1819, he was elected President of the National Committee. He represented the Chickamauga District in the first Constitutional Convention. During his service to the Cherokee people as Principal Chief, he witnessed devastation by both the Indian Removals and the U.S. Civil War.

"Richard Martin, of Caswell Co., N. C., aged 77 years. Application made in Oct., 1832. He enlisted, for 18 months, May 7, 1776, under Capt. Roger Moore, in the 4th N. C. Regiment, commanded by Col. Polk. They marched to the Northern states, under Col. Jas. Thaxton and were stationed in Georgetown, Md. (now D.C.), where he was inoculated for the small-pox. He was retained in the service 2½ yrs, serving in Penn. He was at the battles of Germantown, Brandywine and Mammouth, and he left the army Nov. 10, 1778. GEORGE W. MCKINZIE George W. McKinzie is a representative of one of the pioneer families of Comanche County. He was born in Murray County, Georgia, July 18, 1852 and when a year old was brought by his parents to Texas, the family locating in Bell County. In 1852 they went to Coryell County and in 1853 came to Comanche County, which at that time was not organized. When our subject was a lad of seven, his father (Kenneth) was killed by the Indians, on the 1st of March, 1860. Two years later, his mother, (Mary), married J. W. Jenkins and in 1866, on account of the hostile attitude of the Indians, the family went to Arkansas. In less than a year, however, George W. McKinzie returned to Texas, where he engaged in the cattle business, with which he was familiar from his earliest boyhood. To that industry he devoted his attention until he entered the ranging servicing (Texas Rangers), with which he was connected until 1876, doing duty under Captain B.S. Foster (Frontier Battalion - Company E - Texas Rangers Source -http://www.texasranger.org/ReCenter/Captains.pdf) . In 1869 he was married, but after five years secured a legal separation. He had two children, William Kenneth, who is now twenty-three years of age; and John G. S., who died in childhood. The former resides with his mother and conducts a farm.

Our subject owns an improved farm, which he is now renting. In 1880 he embarked in merchandising at Ruble's Bridge, and also had charge of the toll-bridge across Leon river. The same year he took the census of his district and in addition to his other work he has followed a carpentering at Dublin and Abilene, being a skillful mechanic. He married Miss Melinda C. In his political views, George W. McKinzie is a stalwart Democrat, having always adhered to the principles of that party. In 1874 he was elected school director, and served for one term under Republican rule, but has never been an aspirant for office. It will be interesting in this connection to note something of the family of which Mr. George W. McKinzie is a family of and of which he is a representative. His parents, Kenneth and Mary McKinzie, belonged to prominent families of Georgia, where they were married, soon after immigrating to Texas. The former (Kenneth) was a son of Charles Mckinzie, who married a Miss. Johnson. Her death occurred in Georgia, and later he was married in that state to Stacey N. Murray. In 1859 he came to Texas and took up his abode in Comanche County, where he engaged in farming and

GEORGE JAMES HAM Jr.

HAM Jr., GEORGE JAMES George James Ham Jr., a lifetime resident of El Cajon, passed away unexpectedly at home on December 19, 2009, at the age of 57. George was born at Mercy Hospital in San Diego, CA, to George James Ham, Sr. and Mary Jane Ham on his father's birthday, March 12, 1952. George is survived by his wife of 28 years the former Joan Leigh Warde, his beloved daughters Michelle and Carolyn, his mother Mary Jane Ham and brother Robert Ham. George attended grammar school in El Cajon, Greenfield Junior High and graduated from Granite Hills High School in 1970. George subsequently graduated in 1974 from the United States International University in San Diego earning his Bachelor's Degree in Business Administration. After college, George joined his father's company, Ham Bros. Construction, Inc. a General Engineering Contractor where he worked in all aspects of managing the family owned business. After his father's retirement, George subsequently worked for several local contractors including Merit Construction, FCI Construction, TC Construction and SC Valley Engineers. George was always considered to be a consummate professional and held in high regard by his professional peers. People gravitated towards George and it was not long before they would fall in love with him. In 1957, George, along with his mother and father, brought his newly born brother home from the hospital on a pillow on his lap. Happy, proud and fiercely protective of his new friend, he never let his brother off the pillow his entire life. George's principal quality in life, without a doubt was his devotion to his entire family, in particular and along with his wife, their two beloved daughters Michelle and Carolyn. George was known by all to be a kind, sensitive and deeply caring individual. Public Viewing will be held at the El Cajon Mortuary on Monday, December 28, 2009, between 4 and 7 p.m. George will be laid to rest beside his father and Graveside Services will be held at the Singing Hills Memorial Park on Tuesday, December 29, 2009, at 10 a.m. All are invited. Donations, in lieu of flowers, are suggested to the Trauma Intervention Program of San Diego at 2560 Orlon Way, Carlsbad, CA 92010 or www.TIPSandiego .org. The volunteers of this organization were a tremendous help during this time of crisis and the Ham Family wishes to express their heartfelt gratitude to these fine individuals.

Hi Sweetie,
Mae Inez Entwisle won “The Title of Miss San Diego” The was Pageant was in 1953. The best I can find and part of what I was told was she was only a princess at the San Diego County “Fairest of the Fair Pageant. She rode on the float as one of the Princesses’ in the Rose Bowl Parade along with that years Fairest of the Fair winner. Dean Jones followed the float, and ask her to marry him, and an hour later they were married. That was 01 January 1954. She was married to him for about 17½ years and had two girls Carol Elizabeth and Deanna Mae. They both remarried. (The most famous of the Fairest of the Fair was Raquel Tejada (Raquel Welch actress in the movies.)
Hope you are well. Miss you. willi

Dooley DNA Group F

DNA tests have proven that the following men are very closely related. They match 25 out of 25 DNA markers. Those who have had the 37 marker test match 37 out of 37 markers. It is known that at least three of the men are brothers, they are marked in blue. The degree of kinship between the others is not known at this time. Some of the men could also be brothers with the three, while others may be close cousins. Their names are written in various records as Dooly, Dooley, Dula, Duley. In most of the old Georgia records the name is usually written Dooly.

William Dula born 1756 Virginia; died 16 Jan 1835 Wilkes County, North Carolina

William Dooley born 1781/82 Virginia; died 1851 Elbert County, Georgia [the area that later became Hart County]

Thomas Dooley born abt 1789 Virginia; died 1862 Habersham County, Georgia

Bennett Dooley born abt 1792/95; died 1874 Franklin County, Georgia [1850 census has born 1795 North Carolina; 1860 census: born 1793 Georgia; 1870 census: born 1792 Virginia]

John Dooley born abt 1794; died after 1870 Georgia (probably Dawson County)

James Dooley born 1797 Georgia; d 1881 Forsyth County, Georgia

William Dooley born abt 1813 Georgia; d 1852 Whitfield County, Georgia

Through DNA testing it has been proven that these men listed above could NOT be related to Jacob Dooley b 1755 [wife Elizabeth Bush]; or William Stephen Dooley b 1754, said to be sons of Henry Dooley and his wife Martha Anderson. Men related to Henry and Martha Anderson Dooley are in a different DNA group completely...., DNA Group A. Before DNA testing became available many researchers believed that Henry and Martha Anderson Dooley were the parents of most of the Dooley men born in Virginia in that time frame. We now know this is not correct.

DNA tests also prove that these seven men could NOT be related to Matthew Dooley 1780 SC-1864 [wife Mary Collier] or James Dooley 1746-1824 TN [wife Margaret McKinney; Rachel Moore] as they are in DNA Group B.

Nor could they be related to Samuel Duley 1742/49 or his probable son Thomas Dooley 1786 [wife Hannah Stader]. They are in DNA Group C.

Dooley story - Two different men"

This story about Dooley DNA should be corrected Wm Dooley b 1781 VA; d 1 nov 1851

Hart County, Georgia) who married Elizabeth.

Not to Wm Dooley b 1780; dead after 1860
Pickens County, Alabama who married

DNA tests

DNA tests have proven that William Dooley [1781/82-1851] is closely related to the following Georgia men. They match 25 out of 25 DNA markers. The degree of kinship is not known at this time. Some of the men could be his brothers, some cousins.

Thomas Dooley born abt 1789 Virginia; died 1862 Habersham Co., Georgia

Bennett Dooley born abt 1793/95; died aft 1870 Georgia

John Dooley born abt 1794; died after 1870 Georgia

James Dooley born 1797 Georgia; d 1881 Forsyth Co., Georgia

William Dooley born abt 1813 Georgia; d 1852 Georgia

William Dula born 1756 VA; died 16 Jan 1835 Wilkes Co., North Carolina

DNA tests also prove that this William Dooley could NOT be related to Jacob Dooley b 1755; or a William Stephen Dooley b 1754, said to be sons of Henry Dooley and his wife Martha Anderson. Probable sons of Henry and Martha Dooley, from Bedford County, Virginia are in a different DNA group completely - DNA group A.

William could NOT be related to Matthew Dooley 1780-1864 or to Gideon 1792, their DNA is not the same. They are in DNA group B.

Family letter written to May Powers on January 28, 1949 by W. H. Thomas states:

. . . that the Gibbs were originally Scottish that left England during the War of The Roses . . . "They were Scotch, came to England with the Stuart Kings, were Royalists and left to save their heads when Cromwell cut off the head of their King, Charles I. The family evidently possessed wealth and power under the Stuart dynasty."

"Nicholas Gibbs, son of Nicholas Gibbs, was born in the Duchy of Baden in 1733. Coming first to Pennsylvania . . . he sojourned for some time on Antietam Creek in Chowan County, Maryland where he married Mary . . . they all came to Orange County North Carolina in the 1750's . . . The Gibbes left Alamance in 1791 and came to Sharp's Station in Big Valley." (Tennessee)

There is a book titled, "Notable Families of Tennessee" published by Miss Zella Armstrong of Chattenooga that gives some information on the Gibbs family.

From a book called: "Nicholas Gibbs and His Descendants" by the Nicholas Gibbs Historical Society:

"The grandfather of Nicholas Gibbs left England because of religious and political reasons to save his head when his King, Charles I, lost his in 1649. He married a woman in Amsterdam and never went back to London, but sought refuge along the Rhine River in Germany, and it was in the Village of Wallruth, near the town of Krumbach, Duchy of Baden, that Nicholas was born September 29, 1733.
In the original Gibbs family there were three brothers, Peter, Abraham, and Nicholas, and two sisters, Mary and Catherine. Abraham and Nicholas came from Germany to America, Nicholas coming to America in 1747 and Abraham sometime prior to that time. Peter died in Germany before Nicholas left for America. Abraham settled in the town of Fredericktown, Maryland and his descendants were residents of Baltimore, Maryland, in 1846. Nicholas, named for his father, became offended with his father in some way and left home for America at age of 14 (1747). He left home with 30 guineas ($150.00 in American money), which the captain of the ship told him was just half enough to pay for his fare across the ocean, so Nicholas sold his time to pay for the other half. After working his time out for the other half of his fare, he joined the English army and served five years in the French and Indian Wars. While he was a soldier his brother, Abraham, heard of him and sought an appointment with him. Nicholas had no recollections of ever having seen his brother, so he applied the criterion his mother had given him by which to idenity Abraham. should ever they meet, which was a spot or scar on Abraham's head. Finding the spot on Abraham's head, he at once claimed him as his brother. After serving his tour of five years, Nicholas went to Frederickstown, Maryland, to live with his brother, Abraham. However, his brother's wife and he did not harmonize, so Nicholas went to North Carolina and settled in Orange County, where he married Miss Mary Ephland, and where part of his family was grown and some married before he came to East Tennessee to settle 12 miles northeast of Knoxville, Tennessee, near House Mountain."

French & Indian War - enlisted Sept. 1, 1757, Pvt.

Another distinguised settler at Sharp's Station was Nicholas Gibbs. Gibbs was born in the Duchy of Baden, German, on September 29, 1733. It is claimed that he saw service in the French and Indian War and during the American Revolution as an official of Orange County, North Carolina, under the Continental Government. The Gibbs family had once been courtiers at the royal court when the Stuart dynasty held power in England and held great estates there. Gen. G. W. Gibbs, a son of Nicholas, in a letter to the first William Gibbs McAdoo, in 1846, stated that his family left England to save their heads at the time their king lost his, from this bit of information, we believe that the Gibbs family migrated to German when Cromwell came to power and caused King Charles I to be executed.
Before migrating to Tennessee Nicholas Gibbs lived some four miles from present Burlington, North Carolina on Liberty Road. Stoner's Church at the confluence of the creeks that united to form Great Alamance, housed both the German Reform and the Lutheran congregations. Hundreds of people throughout East Tennessee proudly claim descent from Nicholas Gibbs and his wife, Mary Efland. Gibbs and his family moved to upper Knox County, Tennessee, after Indian hostilities ceased where he purchased many acres and raised a large family. The Gibbs community and Gibbs High School bear his name. Gibbs died in 1817 and was buried on the homeplace at near Harbison's Cross Roads. His log home, built in 1792, still stands.

His children were:

1. Elizabeth Gibbs, born 1765, married John Snodderly, buried at Lost Creek Cemetery.
2. Mary Gibbs, born 1766, married Henry Albright, buried at Stoner's churchyard, Orange (now Alamance) Co., NC
3. Sarah Gibbs, married Conrad Sharp, buried Lost Creek Cemetery.
4. John Gibbs, married Ann Howard and was buried near the mouth of Hinds' Creek in Anderson Co., TN.
5. Catherine Gibbs, married John Holmes and is buried in Stoner's churchyard, Alamance Co., NC.
6. Nicholas Gibbs Jr., married Rachel Doyle. He was a captain and fell in the Battle at Horseshoe Bend, supposedly buried there.
7. David Gibbs, born in 1774, married Sarah Tulman, daughter of Tobias and Catherine Sharp Tillman. Catherine was a daughter of Henry and Barbara Graves Sharp. Tobias settled where the late Harvey Stooksbury lived near Loyston, but migrated to Preable County, Ohio, in 1803.
8. Jacob Gibbs, born 1777, married Hulda Reed and is buried in Gibbs family graveyard near Harbinson's Cross Roads, Knox Co., TN.
9. Barbara Gibbs, married Dr. Beriah Frazier and is buried in Rhea Co., TN
10. Sylphenia Gibbs, married Jesse Martin and migrated to Missouri .
11. George W. Gibbs, married Leanna Dibrell of White Co., TN. He was a lawyer and banker in Nashville, founded Union City, TN, and buried there. He was Adjutant General of TN under Gov. William Carroll.
12. Daniel Gibbs, born 1786, married Sarah Sharp.

Henry R Martin, Sr. Obit Died 9-10-1882

As Written by Fredda Jones

Reading of Henry R. Martin's life in northern Georgia, I can't help but think about how sterile it is when words like "remove', "removal" and "relocated" are used to describe the herding of the Cherokee from land that was suddenly way too valuable to be owned by Indians, even those who (like my Mom's people) had accumulated quite a lot of wealth by the standards of the day.

Apparently Henry R. Martin, who finished out his life in Comanche, Texas, first helped "remove" my mom's people from north Georgia so that he and the others like him could occupy that land and yet, it is so easy to read the words and feel none of the emotion of those people who were forced to leave behind all that they had known. Their homes…and in many cases like with my mom's "people," and their plantations and the lives they had built for themselves. (Did you Know that Chief John Ross's blood only had 1/8 Indian?)

I don't know if the ironies of life strike you as they do me, but as I type tonight, I think of my close friend Vickie Gore Harvick, whose great-great grandfather married Martin's daughter in Comanche County---and here we are in the 21st century two friends, one who ties in at least by marriage to the "remover" and one who ties into the "removee." It's a strange world!

The following obituary was printed in the Comanche Chief. Like all of these old obits, it must be taken with a grain of salt, parts completely accurate and parts with a grain of salt, parts completely accurate and parts maybe a bit of supposition. For instance, I have found nothing that leads me to believe that Martin had a home built in Comanche County by 1854.

In the portion of the obit, which I cannot read, I assume it mentions that in 1865 Martin did marry a second time. In fact, I believe that he married the widowed Stacy (Murray) McKinzie, his daughter's first mother-in-law…I think. 🙂

When the average man once casts his lot upon the frontier, it is often the case that he continues to move to the borders of civilization until old age disqualifies him for further enterprise. That fact is illustrated by the career of Henry Martin, Sr. who died last week, at his last earthy home, six miles north of Comanche.

Henry R. Martin, Sr. Obit Died 9-10-1882

Henry Martin, Sr., (familiarly and affectionately known in Comanche County under the name of Grandpa Martin) was born in Edgefield district, South Carolina, on the 16th days of April 1800, and was therefore, at the date of his death, which occurred as above on the 10th of September, 1882, aged 82 years, 4 months and 25 days.

At the age of nineteen, he immigrated to Georgia, where in Habersham County he was married to Elinder DOOLEY, whose parents were emigrants from North Carolina. He remained in Habersham County nine years. This was during the period when the wild hunt for gold was agitating that region of Georgia, and before the Indians had left the state. At the expiration of that time he removed to Lee County, where he remained only nineteen months, and returned to Habersham county.

Resting there for a short time, he removed into what was then known as the Cherokee purchase, in that section of it now known as Walker County. He settled in Dogwood Valley on Chickamauga creek. The County around was then occupied by Cherokee Indians. There were but three white families in the county at that time.

He next moved to Arkansas and stopped six miles south of Little Rock. In the Spring of 1836 he planted a crop there, but some of his family having sickened, he became dissatisfied, sold out and moved back to Georgia, settling this time on East Chickamauga creek, in the year 1837

He next helped remove the Cherokees from Georgia to Chattanooga, Tennessee preparatory to their removal west of the Mississippi river. He then settled in Murray County, Georgia, near Catoosa Springs, and remained there until the fall of 1852.

In the fall of 1852 he started for Texas while on the way he was delayed by high water in St Francis County, Arkansas. While there, his wife, Elinder, sickened and died.

Mrs. Martin was in every respect a dutiful good Christian woman. The date of her death was December the 5th 1852. She was long a member of the Methodist church, and her dying words were an exhortation to her family to lead Christian lives, in preparation for the great change she was then experiencing.

Grandpa Martin embraced religion in Georgia and joined the Methodist church there, remaining a member thereof until his removal to Texas where he united with the Baptist church. He was baptized by immersion, by Elder J.R. Northcut on the first Sunday in April 1874.

From the period of his conversion in Georgia to his death, he was a devoted Christian, the hospitalities of his home always welcoming the preachers, and offering rest and food to the tired and the hungry. When he was buried the largest assembly of people ever seen in Comanche County, on a similar occasion, in tearful sympathy, stood around his grave in the burying ground of Zion Hill church.

Mrs. Elinder Martin gave birth to thirteen children. Five of them were married at the time of her death.

Grandpa Martin arrived in Bell County, Texas on the 5th of March, 1853, and settled a place on the Salado. In the fall of 1854, and in company with his son-in-law, J.A. McGUIRE, who now lives on Rush creek, in Comanche County, he started for the wilds of Comanche County with a load of corn, farming tools and house furniture, and stopped one mile east of where the town of Comanche now stands, and there built a house, believed to be the first in the County, in which he deposited his goods on the 15th of December 1854.

He returned to Bell County for his family, with whom he arrived at his ranch on the 12th of February, 1855. He remained at this place for 16 months and then settled the place on Indian creek where A.J. STEWART now lives. He remained there until January, 1861. At this time all his children were married excepting one son. This son was killed during the late civil war, fighting on the confederate side.

While he lived on Indian Creek, there were a great many Indians in the country, but they were peaceable and well-disposed until about the winter of 1857 and 1858, when they became hostile and troublesome, stealing horses and occasionally killing settles. During the period of hostilities they stole from Grandpa Martin about thirty horses.

The rest I cannot read.

About Fredda Jones

Fredda Davis Jones was raised “in the Country” in Comanche County and learned very early that creativity and innovation are traits that can flourish even in small-town Texas and that with enough effort, indeed nothing is impossible, including being married to the same man for over 40 years! Rickey and Fredda have 2 children, 6 grandchildren, and a crazy life that includes sitting in the bleachers several times a week. The rest of her time is spent creating great content for texansunited.com and marketing small-town Texas.

The Comanche Chief, Comanche, Texas. Thursday, Jan. 22, 1880:

EARLY SETTLEMENT OF COMANCHE COUNTY

AN INTERESTING REMINISCENCE BY THE FIRST WHITE SETTLER

On the night of the 18th Dec. 1854, the first settlers of Comanche county, Jesse MERCER and F.M. COLLIER, struck camp in a Live Oak grove, one mile east of Dr. Geo. W. MONTGOMERY's residence-formerly MERCER's; the first furrow plowed in the county, was done by B.J. HOLMSLEY-on Holmsley's creek-in the HOLMSLEY field; the first cabin was built by F.M. COLLIER, on Mercer's creek, one mile east of Dr. MONTGOMERY's residence; the first birth in the county was Thos. A. COLLIER, son of F.M. and Julia A., born May 30, 1855; the first death in the county was a little daughter of C.H. ISHAM, one mile south-west from Comanche town, who was poisoned by eating berries from mesquite mistletoe; the first man killed was J.H. FOREMAN, in an altercation with Jesse REED at the crossing on Mercer's creek near where J.F. KETTLE's farm now is; the first marriage license was issu
t. CUNNINGHAM's residence on Mountain creek.; the first sermon was preached by Rev. B. KEMP-Methodist-at F.M. COLLIER's cabin; the first Baptist sermon was preached by Rev. HOWARD, on Mercer's creek, near Fletcher NEELEY's residence; the first school and church house was on Mercer's creek, near Dr. R. TUGGLE's old place-now D.H. CUNNINGHAM's; the first Indian depredations was the stealing of Adam's-not Ichabod's-an emigrant moving to the settlement-horses by two Comanche Indian's, on Warren's creek in the valley where Uncle Billy LATHAM's-Mama HONEY's-field is now; the first persons killed by Indians, were - BEAN and his negro man, near the Twinn mountains, now in Hamilton county, and Peter C. JOHNSON, near Johnson's peak in Bosque county-BEAN a ETT's son, on the Baggett branch, north of the North Leon, during the same raid that FROWMAN was killed. Kenith McKENZIE was mortally wounded, and died in a few hours, in an Indian fight after night, in the north edge of Comanche town, where Buggertown now is. The first settlers on Indian creek were John A. McGUIRE, Henry MARTIN, Sr., and C.H. ISHAM. MARTIN and McGUIRE got there with their families in Feb 1855

Reading of Henry R. Martin's life in ~~the~~ northern Georgia, I can't help but think about how sterile it is when words like "remove", "removal" and "relocated" are used to ~~describe~~ describe the herding of the Cherokee from land that was suddenly way too valuable to be owned by Indians, even those who (like my mom's people) had accumulated quite a lot of weath by the standards of the the day.

Apparently Henry R. Martin, who finished out his life in Comanche, Texas, first helped "remove" my mom's people from north Georgia so that he and the others like him could occupy that land. And yet, it is so easy to read the words + feel none of the emotion of those people who were forced to leave behind all that they had known. Their homes... and in many cases like with my mom's "people," their plantations and the lives they had built for themselves (Did you know that Chief John Ross's blood was only had 1/8 Indian?)

I don't know if the ironies of life strike you as they do me, but as I type tonight, I think of my close friend Vicki Gore Harvick, whose great-great grandfather married Martin's daughter in Comanche County... and here we are in the 21st century two friends, one who ties in at least by marriage to the "remover" and one who ties into the "removee". It's a strange world!

The following obituary was printed in the Comanche Chief. Like all of ~~these~~ these old obits, it must be taken with a grain of salt, parts completely accurate and parts maybe a bit of supposition. 701

He next moved the Cherokees from Georgia to Chatanooga Tennessee, preparatory to their removal west of the mississippi river. He then settled a murray county, Georgia, near Catoosa Springs & remained there until the fall of 1852.

In the fall of 1852 he started for Texas. While on the way he was delayed by high water in St Francis County, Arkansas. While there, his wife, Elender, sickened & died

Mrs Martin was in every respect a dutiful, good Christian Woman. The date of her death was December the 5th 1852. She was long a member of the Methodist church, and her dying words were an exhortation to her family to lead Christian lives, in preparation for the great change she was then experiencing.

Grandpa Martin embraced religion in Georgia & joined the methodist church there, remaining a member thereof until his removal to Texas, where he united with the Baptist church. He was baptized by emmersion, by Elder J. R. Northcut on the first Sunday in April 1874

From the period of his conversion in Georgia to his death, he was a devoted Christian, the hospitalities of his home always welcoming the preachers, and offering rest and food to the tired and the hungry. When he was buried, the largest assembly of people ever seen in Comanche County, on a similiar occasion, in tearful sympathy, stood around his grave in ~~the~~ the burying ground of Zion Hill church.

Mrs. Elender Martin gave birth to thirteen children. Five of them were married at the time of her death.

instance, I have found nothing that leads me to believe that Martin had a home built in Comanche County by 1854

In the portion of the obit, which I cannot read, I assume it mentions that in 1865 Martin did marry a second time,
In fact, I believe that he married the widowed Stacy (Murray) McKenzie, his daughter's first mother-in-law.... I think ☺
